All transactions on the Ethereum network charge a small fee called “gas” to compensate miners to approve and add the transaction to the ledger. IMO launches are often very hectic with lots of investors trying to get in all at the same time. Transactions with a lot of gas will have priority over transactions with less gas. To ensure that your transaction goes through properly, we recommend that you put a healthy amount of gas on your transaction to ensure that you are able to participate in the IMO and don't get “out-gassed.”

Q19) What Gas Limit should be set while doing ETH transaction?

Set Gas Limit to 50000 (which is a safe limit) in order to maximise the chances of executing your transaction. Best thing about this is unused gas is automatically and immediately refunded to user.
